The Plague

The Plague, or Black Death, swept across Europe in the 14th century, killing nearly half of the European population. The bacterium Yersinia pestis, which caused the disease, originated in central Asia and was most likely brought to Europe by fleas. These fleas lived on rats which frequently traveled on merchant ships from Asia to Europe.

The most common symptoms were small tumors that appeared on the body, usually around the neck or armpit. These tumors grew in size, sometimes as large as an apple, and eventually spread all over the body. They darkened in color until they became black. Victims usually died within eight days, although some accounts of recovery have been recorded. The unsanitary conditions of European cities and the medical knowledge of the Middle Ages did little to combat the disease. Occasional European outbreaks occurred until the 19th century.
